Garden

- Fulham Palace is the historic home of the Bishop of London since 704 AD.
- The Palace encompasses a suite of historic Grade I listed buildings, a Grade II listed garden, a popular café and an in-house museum.
- The site is managed by Fulham Palace Trust. Established in 2011, we are a small independent charity dedicated to maintaining the Palace and garden and sharing the site's history with the public.
- We welcome an average of 350,000 visitors to the Palace each year. The site is open to all and free to visit all year round.

- The botanic garden at Fulham Palace encompasses 13 acres of stunning plantings, rare trees and a beautiful walled garden.
- Developed over the centuries by various resident Bishops, the current garden is largely based on Bishop Terrick's 18th century layout.
- The walled garden incorporates an earlier Tudor wall and now plays host to a vineyard, vegetable and flower beds and a renowned 17-meter wisteria thought to be around 200 years old.

'For over 1,000 years Fulham Palace has been a green oasis in this corner of west London. It is the home of many botanical firsts and the second oldest botanic garden in London. Today, our house and garden are open seven days a week, free of charge, to be enjoyed by all who visit'

It is now five years since we launched our biodiversity and climate change policy. In 2024, we were able to build a new pond and launch our outdoor learning programme. Inside the house, we have replaced the halogen lighting in the historic Porteus Library with LED lighting. We continue to widen the debate on environmental issues to include the discussion of the decolonisation of horticulture in the heritage environment.'

Sian Harrington, chief executive of Fulham Palace Trust

Fulham Palace Trust is committed to:

- introducing more planting schemes in its gardens which encourage biodiversity;
- carrying out sustainable and environmentally sound horticultural practices;
- measuring the local climate at our weather station and informing our visitors about the changes we are seeing in our garden;
- encouraging and inspiring visitors, volunteers, staff and tenants to reduce their own pollution and carbon footprint;
- reflecting ecology and climate issues in our events programming;
- using green electricity tariffs;
- using environmental and energy efficiency best practice when managing our estate and when undertaking restoration and improvements.

In 2025/26 our renewed focus on our buildings and facilities includes the following:

- We will be undertaking bee surveys on site with the help of the London Natural History Society.
- We will be further improving our waste segregation to include the separate collection of all food waste from all our staff areas and kitchens, alongside our composting waste stream.
- Our waste contractor will be using our food waste to generate energy.

About

Go green fest is the Palace's annual springtime celebration of sustainability, gardening and community.

This year's theme is 'do it yourself'. From community repair workshops and eco crafting sessions to expert-led talks on gardening and biodiversity, go green fest is all about encouraging small everyday actions in order to inspire big ideas for the future.

Previously known as the green meet, go green fest is a refreshed format with a renewed focus on a family audience. The event has been reimagined as a hands-on day of discovery, play and ecological inspiration for all ages.

We expect approximately 3,000 attendees.

About

- Go green fest brings the community together to enjoy a range of workshops, activities and expert-led talks. Visitors can enjoy food and drink from a variety of vendors and browse a range of stalls including our own garden barrow.
- This year, all of our activities will be included in a single ticket price, attracting a high number of visitors across a broad spectrum of market segments.
- The event is part of Fulham Palace's biodiversity and climate change resilience work, reinforcing our commitment to preserving green spaces and promoting environmentally friendly practices.
